BE A POLLINATOR CHAMPION

Gardeners are nurturers by nature. A sense of fulfillment comes each time we hear a hummingbird whiz on by or watch a robin build a new nest. Whether you garden on ten acres or on your condo's patio, you can provide a safe space for pollinators to live, feed and multiply.

To attract pollinators in this space, we painted our containers in vivid colors that bees, butterflies and hummingbirds can see. Then, we filled them with flat-topped and trumpet-shaped flowers that provide the nutritious pollen and nectar our winged friends are seeking. Whimsical birdhouses made from simple kits were added to attract more biodiversity to the space.

How will you be a champion for pollinators this season?

THE ART OF THE URBAN PATIO

After a busy day in the city, there is nothing sweeter than being able to come home and kick your feet up in a lush green space. You'll forget you're in the middle of the city as you take in the fresh air of your transformed urban oasis.

Surround yourself with an eclectic mix of richly textured, easy care plants in containers that can move with you when your lease is up. Those you see here won't keep you chained to the hose, even with the reflected heat from surrounding structures. Mobile tables made from wooden shipping crates paired with plush ottoman seating are easy to rearrange as needed when entertaining.

FOODSCAPING WITH FLAIR

Maximize the square footage you have by turning it into a multi-use space that combines Proven Harvest™ plants with edible flowers in your patio containers. We took Gardener's Supply Company's suggestion to "grow your own happy hour" in their eight-foot-long, reclaimed wood outdoor planter bar by filling it with aromatic herbs and strawberries that can be conveniently plucked for craft cocktails.

Having fresh ingredients on hand frees up time to relax with your guests and share moments in the edible ambiance you've created. Food has a way of bringing people together, doesn't it?

Keep your flowers in bloom all season by adding continuous release plant food to the soil when you plant, and feeding them every third time you water with water soluble plant food.

A great hanging basket is like jewelry for your front porch, just the right embellishment to greet your guests with a warm hello.

Garden centers abound with full, opulent baskets in spring. If you're limited on space to hang them, it's easy to unclip the hook and transplant the combination of plants into an upright container. Most bowls and urns will do. Voila! You'll have an instantly lush container.

TAKE YOUR RECIPE TO NEW HEIGHTS

If you love the colors in a hanging basket you see at the store but need something a little taller for your space, make it work.

For this corner space, we purchased two identical hanging baskets of Sparkle and Glow. One was transplanted into a short bowl planter while the other went into a taller urn, leaving a gap in the back to add Meteor Shower® verbena.

The taller arrangement lets passersby enjoy the blossoms up close, and maybe even find themselves in a close encounter with butterflies that love verbena.

Find the step-by-step process for suspending a window box at nationalplantoftheyear/grand-traverse-recipe.

THINK OUT OF THE (WINDOW) BOX

Window boxes aren't just for windows! (Who knew?) Have you ever considered suspending one in your outdoor living area and filling it with pre-assembled hanging baskets? Here, we used two baskets to fill a 36-inch box and we were finished planting in no time flat. Just be sure to use a strong support to hang the window box or you could wind up eating petunias for lunch!

DRESS THE DOOR

If hanging baskets are the jewelry of the front porch, then your upright porch pots are like a sassy new pair of shoes that flaunt your lively personality. This is not the place to sport your plain Mary Janes. Jazz things up in front by adding fabulous containers filled with prismatic blooms. While you're at it, take another look at your door color and ask yourself, could I go bolder?

SWEET SANCTUARY

Give your family a reason to spend more time together outdoors by designing a mindful, relaxing space for gathering. Here, a custom-built planter "bed" and surrounding seating encourages everyone to come and unwind, start a good summer read, share a story, or calm their minds through yoga.

Ocean blues and verdant greens illuminate this cool space while soothingly fragrant plants like At Last® roses and Sweet Romance® lavender create a tranquil, calming atmosphere. So, kick your shoes off. You're going to want to stay awhile.

Few materials could be considered so modern, yet so ancient. Our ancestors understood what we know today: terra cotta is a tried and true, versatile, inexpensive and widely accessible material for growing plants. Roots breathe easily as oxygen and moisture are exchanged through its porous walls. Natural baked earthenware offers safekeeping for plants we intend to eat. And you'll find it in every shape and size imaginable.

 Watch how easy it is to install the WaterWise™ system at provenwinners.com/waterwise.

 Learn how to build your own terra cotta pot wall at provenwinners.com/terra-cotta.

Soil in unglazed terra cotta pots naturally dries faster than that in glazed or plastic pots. Installing a WaterWise drip watering system will keep your plants from getting too thirsty.

Pretty. Powerful.

The native Invincibelle® Spirit II hydrangea is not just a workhorse in the garden. It is also the keystone of our Invincibelle® Spirit Campaign for a Cure, which was inspired by the women and men who are bravely battling breast cancer. Since its launch in 2009, the campaign has raised over $1 million for the Breast Cancer Research Foundation® one dollar at a time through the sale of each Invincibelle® Spirit hydrangea. But there's still more work to do.

A MODERN TAKE ON NATIVES

You may not realize that many of our most beloved garden plants, like the smooth hydrangeas you see here, have native roots. Modern natives offer important improvements that matter to us like greater disease resistance, so no chemicals are needed to stay healthy. They can also have stronger flower stems that won't flop in the garden and hold up beautifully in a vase. Still others produce more flowers over a longer period.

Key traits like these allow us to cultivate beautiful, low maintenance spaces around our homes using durable native plants.

 Find in-depth information about all of the native perennials and shrubs we offer at provenwinners.com/native.

CULTIVATE A NATIVE SPACE

Native gardens are meant to be cyclical in nature, providing nourishment and livable spaces for pollinators as they migrate through the area. Here, a native ninebark offers food for native bees in late spring before hummingbirds arrive to sip from the coral bells in early summer. Native diervillas, coneflowers, penstemon and phlox cater a summer-long feast for the eyes of pollinators and gardeners alike. With careful selection, your natives can bring color to the garden in every season.

ARTFUL BOTANICALS

Earthy boho chic style is thriving in today's modern era as people long to surround themselves with organic, life affirming elements and inspired pieces. This small nook was turned into a curated space dripping with layered elegance, from botanical tapestries to aged wood storage pieces that hold stories all their own. Textural foliage plants that don't mind the lower light are uniquely showcased in kokedamas, terrariums and macramé hangers.

Making your own Kokedama or terrarium is easier than you might think. Find the how-tos at provenwinners.com/kokedama.

WHICH HYDRANGEA IS RIGHT FOR YOU?

A stunning array of hydrangeas awaits gardeners across North America, including the five diverse species you see here. Consider growing super cold hardy panicle and smooth hydrangeas if you garden in zones 3 or 4, or grow them all if your climate is a bit milder. One can never have enough hydrangeas!

We've worked with Laura of Garden Answer and our shrub partners at Proven Winners® ColorChoice® to create a full bounty of hydrangea information and inspiration for you.
